Pall Mall Gazette an interesting and well written article on "France and the Far East." in which the reported intention of the 13850 French Government to occupy Tonquin is 13918 13934 discussed. As the Gazette remarks, "Con-14104 sidering the importance of the project, it 14161 14169 14195 has attracted surprisingly little attention." 14252 14 53 14278 That may be accounted for, however, in great 1410 14434 14435 measure, we think, by the fact that no other dant, Mr. Coxon, was proposed and carried by 14495 145 4 14519 European Power has any interest in Cochin-14579 14595 14607 China, and Great Britain alone has any great 14743 14766 14779 stake in the trade with Yunnan and Western 14839 14843 14859 China. France is not likely to provoke inter-15018 15029 ference even if she were, as the Pall Mall 15099 15120 hints, to annex the whole of Annam as well

THINESE IMPERIAL GOVERNMENT improve it, with proper cultivation, but it is, according to all accounts, not to be compared with Tonguin either in the fertility of its soil, current of the above Loan, together with the or the richness of its natural resources. The Pall Mall Gazette rather exaggerates the effect the opening up of the trade route with Yunnan by the Song-kei would have on the prosperity of Shanghai. We do not believe perceptibly. It might at first, perhaps, make that it would affect the Model Settlement a slight difference, but the great effect of the opening up of the Song-koi would be mainly to create a trade, not to abstract it from otherchannels. It is very possible that at the outset the French Government may be seriously disappointed at the results of the step they are about to take. It must not be forgotten that Yunnan, though naturally a rich province, was laid waste and depopulated during the suppression of the Mahomedan rebellion, and it would be folly to suppose that the wrecks of the towns and villages left could prove very large customers for European wares. Moreover, the existence on the frontiers for so many years of bands of brigands, who molest traders and keep the population in a state of constant uneasiness and terror, serves to restrict the extension of commerce, and will sert by the Chinese Imperial troops, and it DIRECTORY for HONGKONG, MACAO, PARcondition into which it has been plunged. At the same time there can be no possible doubt that the trade route up the Song-koi will ICHANG, CHEFOO. TARU. We have already more than once called attention | it soon :to the Sanskrit inscription, discovered by Mr. E. H. Parker, at the entrance to the Temple of the Sleeping Buddha in Canton. The question has aften been raised: What is the correct interpretation of this sentence, which forms one of the most oft-repeated prayers of Buddhists? I shall here give a list of references to the subject for the use of future students :--(I.) Handbook for the Student of Chinese Buddhism, where the Chinese transliteration is given

The annual interest on this now amounts to 110,000 yen. and it is proposed that, with some additional capital, it shall be applied towards the establishment of a spinning factory. No blame was attached to Governor Weld, who was believed to have been udvised that the more hauteur indulged in towards notive dignitaries the higher would he the respect inspired toward Great Britain. Nor am I disposed to consider this advice unsound as applied to the petty officials of the Javan and Peninsular States. But the ruler and nobles of Siam are not ignorant, and pempous, barbarians decked out in jewels and gold, and with no thought beyond their acquisition and display. They are educated and polished gentlemen. trained on the European systems, acoustomed to the society of foreigners of ability, rank, and inish, and fully able to hold their own with the best of them. Above all things they excel in with whom they are brought in contact, and they feel naturally that they have a right to expect the same treatment from others. The breaches of stiquette complained of were not of a serious nature in European eyes, but in theirs, accustomed to yield much, they were more so. Instead of receiving H.E. the Minister at the door of the apartment on his arrival, and accompanying him to it on his departure, Governor Weld is said to have remained at his chair and only to have advanced three steps from it to greet him, as Her Majesty or the Kaiser might have done. Now this in Siamese eyes would appear to be scant courtesy. The King of Siam, when giving audience to an Ambassador, always meets him at the door of the andience room, conducts him to his sent, and escorts him to the door on his retiring. Surely he had a right to expect the same attention to his Ambassador at the hands of the Governor of a petty demadency of an ally. Again, it is asserted that the Governor did not return the Minister's call, and the reason is supposed to be because H.E. was stopping at the house of a Chinese, a class the Consul of Siam. As an official he must have the entrée of Govornment House, and I fail to see that any serious detriment could have been sustained by the gobernatorial dignity in returning the call of a Minister Plenipotentiary at his house. You will, of course, understand that all these statements and conjectures are purely from public rumour. I know nothing of my own knowledge, but such as they are they are implicity believed in by the native and foreign population here. If they are incorrect the responsibility rests in very high native quarters. That the Minister was seriously autoved at hi reception and its concemitants is shown by his refusal to dine at Government House (a convanient stoward-ache being his excuse) and his sending his subordinates to represent him on that opeasion. These are the facts of the case as reported and currently believed in Bangkok.

TWENTY PORT. Growers and merchants hailed that memorable year as one that must spread the reputation of their wares, as it went far towards making some handsome fortunes. Never had they shipped more lusquous wine; and it had it all the qualities that improve with keeping. It "was as sweet as syrup, and nearly as black as ink; it was full of naturally formed charming of dell's houses, eminently suited alcohol, and of all the vinous constituents most of them far beyond the analysis of the ablest chemist, which go to make of wine a liquor differing from all other liquors." But its brilliant merits actually compromised the growers, by introducing their best customers to an exceptional standard of excellence Theoceforward would be connoisseurs in sisted upon a dark, sweet, and slightly spirituous wine before everything; and the genuine vintages of the Douro are ordinarily of a bright ruby tint. .. So the merchants had to doctor to suit the market; through Mr. Crawfurd maintains, as a matter within his knowledge, that the doctoring was always done as innocuously as possible. Logwood was never used, for the simple reason that it is a dye that would not answer the purpose. Dried elderberries were employed; but the elderberry is harmless; and brandy was infused more freely than before. in order to check the fermentation of the must. But those who object to the introduction of such foreign elements as olderberries may take comfort from the information that they are gone out of use with a change in the fashion. The traditions of the 1820 wine, with its more or less spurious imitations, have been steadily dying out; and now the public are content with port of the natural garnet colour. And if they do desire to have it darker, it is found that, in practice, "there is a much cheaper dvo and a far more beautiful one always at hand in Portugal; it is the natural colour of the darker varieties of

Not long ago Oxford students at their matriculation had to swear to conform to the statutes of the University. Among them was one which absolutely prohibited "the use of the herb nicotiana or tobacco;' while another enjoined on undergraduates that they should be always apparelled in garments of a dark or "subfuse" hue. In the solemn oath which is administered to Knights of the Garter, they are reminded that "this garter" is "never to be forgotton or laid aside." Even the original knightse to whom the institution was something mor. serious than we regard it nowadays, must each and all of them have repeatedly broken. Souls' College, at Oxford, was founded by Archbishop Chichele that the fellows of the same might pray for the repose of the souls of those who fell at Agincourt; and not long. since there was a fellow who regularly paid for certain masses at the little Catholic chapel. A Protestant himself, he could not comply with the letter of the obligations imposed upon him, but he fulfilled its spirit.
